AFTER THE BATTLE.

Now, when the smoke of the political battle has swept away; the excitement and strife of factions subsided, a clearer view of the late passionate contest demonstrates the folly of it all as one contemplates the result.

A few short weeks ago the whole country was like a seething cauldron. Everywhere the greatest excitement prevailed over political questions. Why, every four years, should one-half of the people array themselves against the other half on such antagonistic lines, and work up so much passionate energy on questions so vital to the common interests, so potent to the thoughtful and intelligent citizen, is a conundrum hard to solve. Imperialism, so much paraded before, every community seems now like an innocent scare crow hoisted for effect, like a passing ill wind to startle and agitate the timid sons of mankind.

The political agitators would have us believe that the fate of the nation hinged on the word imperialism as defined by Bryanism. Where stands the throne, the sovereign and the regal court of this portentous regime?

Every true American mind must desire to locate this new imperial dynasty and learn if there is any cause to fear a reversion from the simple and safe traditions of the Republic to the imperial methods of Russia or Ancient Rome.

If we turn our eyes toward Washington we find a plain business office called the White House which has been open for business about one hundred years.

It has been talked of being remodeled for the growing necessities of the nation, and for the better convenience of the president's family, but there is no alarm created by this innovation.

There is no imperialism in the effort as far as can be seen; no imperial throne hidden behind the needed improvements.

Now that McKinley is elected, there is as yet, no dictator mentioned of assuming the role; no talk of creating a large army and locating portions of it near large cities.

Wherein, then, is the charge of militarism coming from? What else, after all, has all these questions been raised but to alarm the fearful? What else was the attack on the financial question raised for if it was not a fear to the cupid of mankind for their support?

Were they not righteously named fallacies? And the most singular thing about the whole subject is that there were so many that thought differently.

The Cardinal's "Confidence" Gone.

The story of the cyclist who found over the door of a Cheshire church the cheerful text, "This is the gate of heaven," with the modifying postscript, "This door is closed in the winter," recalls to The Tablet another congruity of a rather similar kind. Cardinal Manning went one day to his publishers for a copy of a book of his own—"Confidence in God." The order was shouted down to the stockroom, when came the reply, "Manning's 'Confidence in God' all gone." The cardinal heard and smiled. It happened that he was just then in a very pessimistic mood, owing to the apathy, as he thought it of his clergy about an agitation (of Mr. Stead's) with which he sympathized and they did not. The cardinal took the reply as an intended lesson, and he left Orchard street a wiser and a happier man.—London Chronicle.

Don't Sleep Facing the Light.

It is very important that the eyes should really rest during the hours of sleep, and this they cannot do if they are not properly shaded. If possible, the bed should be placed where the light from the window does not fall on the face of the sleeper, but in a small room it is inconvenient sometimes to arrange this, and therefore the window should be provided with a dark green blind or covered with curtains. If you are inclined to think that as long as the eyes are closed they are sufficiently shaded you can easily test the matter. Shut your eyes while facing the light and then shade them with your hand. The relief of the interposed shade you will find to be almost as great to the shut eyes as it is when they are open, for the eyelids only lessen the strain on the eyes and do not remove it.

As the result of the conference between the officials and the engineers and firemen of the St. Paul road the company will advance the wages of about 3,000 of the 4,000 employees in these classes from $7 to $10.00. The other classes of employees, with the exception of their hours of work reduced an hour. MOB BURNS A NEGRO.

PRESTON PORTER PAYS WITH LIFE FOR HIS CRIME.

Fire Blazes on the Spot Where His Girl Victim Died—The Father of Louise Frost Puts the Match to the Culprit's Bier.

Preston Porter, Jr., the negro who confessed the assault and murder of 11-year-old Louise Frost, was burned to death at Limon, Colo., in the very place where the crime was committed.

This frightful punishment was meted out by a mob of 300 men, who made no effort to conceal their purpose. No attempt was made by officials to stop the awful proceedings. The sheriff surrendered his prisoner without offering serious resistance, after deliberately leading him to the place where it had been publicly announced a vigilance committee would await his coming.

Porter was removed during the night from the city jail in Denver to the county jail. He was taken out shortly after noon by Sheriff Jones, placed in a closed carriage and driven rapidly to Magnolia, a small station east of Denver. There he was delivered to Sheriff Freeman of Lincoln County, who was on the train bound for Hugo.

The train bearing the negro, in custody of Sheriff Freeman and his deputies, arrived in Limon at 3:45 p. m. The cars were crowded with newspaper reporters and people who were curious to see the negro executed. H. W. Frost, the murdered girl's father, was one of the passengers. When the train stopped sixteen men who had been selected by the vigilance committee entered the train and demanded the prisoner from the sheriff. Their every action was marked by calmness and determination. The sheriff yielded and the train was then allowed to proceed. At Lake Station, about three miles from Limon, the party left the train and began preparations for the deed of vengeance.

The doomed negro was chained to a railroad rail that had been set firmly in the ground, and about this the fuel was placed. Porter did not seem to realize the awful punishment he was destined to undergo.

While every man looked on with bated breath R. W. Frost, the dead girl's father, set fire to the mass of combustible material, and the flames commenced to crackle. Almost instantly the negro's trousers caught fire. Even though the flesh must have been scorched, he did not utter a sound. The flames crept slowly upward on his clothing; the sparks flew up in a cloud of pale smoke. Porter turned his head, and a frightful expression changed his face. With a sudden convulsive tug, he stretched his head as far from the rapidly increasing flames as he could and uttered a cry of pain. "Oh, God, let me go, men! I've got something more to tell you. Please let me go! Oh, my God! my God!"

In terrible screams these words, the first he had uttered aloud, came from the negro. Tugging at the chains, he gave out a succession of awful groans and screams. Not an oath escaped him, but he begged and pleaded to be shot. In the negro's struggles one of the ropes binding him was broken and he fell partially out of the fire. Some wanted to throw him over into the fire; others tried to dash oil upon him. Boards were carried and a large pile made over the prostrate body. They soon were ignited and the terrible heat and lack of air quickly rendered the victim unconscious, bringing death a few moments later.

WILL GO BEFORE CONGRESS.

Claims Growing Out of Occupation of Philippines to Be Submitted.

The President will submit to Congress the claims for indemnification and for other substantial recompense of the British cable corporation which suffered as a result of the American occupation of the Philippines. Another set of claims which will be referred are those arising from the detention and isolation of Japanese subjects in connection with the bubonic plague last summer in San Francisco, and the claims of Japanese citizens for damages sustained through the action of the Hawaiian authorities.

Made Desolate by Winds. Between Formosa and the coast of China lies a group of twenty islands, interspersed with innumerable reefs and ledges, which are called the Pescadores Islands. According to the investigations of a Japanese geologist these islands have suffered in a remarkable manner from the northeast winds, which blow with savage violence there during nine months of the year. The original area of the islands has been greatly reduced by erosion, and their surfaces are barren and desolate, so that the wind-whipped group forms "a vast desert amidst the green island world of southeastern Asia."

By this time the crew were all awake, and as soon as the lantern came the captain seized it and hurried down the ladder, and sprang to the place where the pirate chieftain had been confined. But there lay nothing but a slight mark on the floor. The pirate chieftain was gone, and this was his parting mark. Without a word the captain sprang upon the deck.

"Man the boat!" he gasped, in a hoarse, choking tone.

"All ready, sir," reported Hart. "Did you find—"

"He's gone! Go in the boat, Mr. Hart, and be sure you take that man alive if you can. Do not miss him. Off, now, and buckle to expect him with a will. Where's the boatswain?"

"Here, sir."

"Call away my gig—quick!"

In a few moments more the gig was lowered and manned, and the old gunner was sent in charge of her. Peter Sythe was also sent in the gig, from the fact that the peculiar construction of his eyes enabled him to see at an almost incredible distance in the night.

Shortly after the boat had gone the captain went forward to assure himself that the prisoners were all safe there, and then he went below again. He found a man, whose hammock hung near the spot where Tudel had been confined, standing in his bare frock, and gazing with eagerness on a jacket which he held in his hand.

"What is it, my man?" asked Howard.

"Why, sir—look here. I left my own jacket and trousers here when I turned in, and now they're gone—and these other landside duds have been left in their place. They look just like that Mexican's traps."

"So they are," returned Howard. "The incarnate fiend has murdered poor Nathans, exchanged clothes with you, and made his escape. But we'll have him yet; the boats are after him."

Upon examination the boots by which Tudel had been confined were found. Those which had been upon the wrists were whole, the hands having been gently slipped through them, and these outer bands were free it was an easy matter to remove the irons from the feet, as the bar of the hand irons served to turn the key of the others. No one had thought of searching the prisoner for concealed weapons, though Clarence now felt himself much to blame for not having done so.

With this information it was easy to see how the work had been done. Nathans had received the fatal blow from a hand eminently skilled in that mode of warfare.

The captain directed some of the men to remove the body to the deck. Shortly after this the gig returned, the gunner reporting that no far nothing could be found of the escaped prisoner; but the crew of the cutter had gone on shore, and meant to search carefully there, and also watch to see if he landed after them.

"However," resumed Gould, "I am sure the villain got ashore ahead of us; he had the wind and current in his favor, and if he is an expert swimmer he could easily have gained the beach before we did."

The captain was about to reply, when the sound of oars fell upon his ears, and upon going to the taffrail he could see the outlines of a boat coming towards the schooner.

"It's the first cutter, sir," said Peter. "Perhaps they've found him," uttered Howard, nervously.

"They must have found him, else they wouldn't be coming back," said the gunner. "At any rate they wouldn't be coming now, for they haven't had a chance to hunt any yet."

Clarence gazed down anxiously into her as she came up under the quarter, but it was too dark for him to see plainly. When the boat reached the gangway, Daniels, the coxswain, was the first one to come over the side.

"Where is Mr. Hart?" asked Howard. "He's gone around to the town, sir, to start up horses," replied Daniels.

"Then you have not found the prisoner?" asked Howard, nervously.

"No, sir. He's gone off a horseback. When we went up from the beach we found Tom Silldel flying around in a high passion. He said he had just got out of bed, not more than fifteen minutes before, and that as he looked out at his window he saw a man coming running up from the water. The man passed his house, and Tom thought, turned up into his yard. As quick as he could he put on his clothes and ran out, and was just in time to see a man in sailor's clothes mount his horse. He sang out with all his might, but the horse galloped away like lightning. We told him it was none of our men, but a pirate whom we had captured. He then offered to accompany Mr. Hart to a place where men and horses could be procured, so he went; and sent us back to report to you."

Captain Howard pondered a few minutes upon this, and then he resolved to go on shore. He gave the most strict orders concerning the prisoners, and leaped into his boat and landed at the town. He aroused some of the civil officers as quickly as possible, and ere long fifty horsemen were in pursuit of the fugitive. But Jilok Tudel was not found. Towards the middle of the forenoon on the following day, most of the pursuers had returned, but with no tidings of the pirate.

It was near night when Clarence Howard returned to his vessel. He had lost his most special prisoner, but he had resolved to make a more extended pursuit; he had given notice that he had business inland, and that he might be gone even a month. The boy Peter was the only companion whom he planned to take with him.

CHAPTER V.

In one of the most fashionable parlors of the city of Vera Cruz stood the dwell-

"Yes; and I should think that would be notice enough."

Here Jilok arose and commenced to walk about the room, examining the old oil paintings that hung upon the walls. One of the pictures represented "Wealth" and "Poverty." There was the representation of a beautiful female, mounted upon a splendid and richly caparisoned Andalusian charger; and near by, with her dark, shriveling hand extended, as if for alms, was a miserable looking, back-bent old woman.

"By the mass," uttered the pirate, stopping at this picture and then turning to his host, "this puts me in mind of an old hag who intercepted me as I was on my way to my vessel just before I sailed the last time from this place. She is called Calypso the Wanderer. Have you ever seen such a woman?"

"Yes," returned St. Marc, shuddering in spite of his effort to seem unaffected. "Have you? And what did she want with you?"

"Why, she seemed to be crazy; and as near as I could make out her meaning, she wanted me to be very careful of my child. But what did she want with you?"

"Why—bless her old back, she told me not to presume to make Donna Irene St. Marc my wife. She even went so far as to threaten me with some dire calamity if I dared to disobey her. By the mass, I can't help shuddering now when I think of her. But where did you see her?"

"She came here to my own house—and her errand was the same to me as to you. She swore I should suffer if I gave Irene a hand to you."

"But what and who is she, do you suppose?"

"I'm sure I can't tell."

"But you don't suppose she has any power to carry out her threats, do you, St. Marc?"

"No, I do not. At any rate, I am ready to run my share of the risk. She can only be some crazy old woman, and as my child has bestowed alms upon her several times, I suppose she thought she would stand up for the good of her benefactress."

"What? and do you suppose Irene has told her that she does not wish to marry with me?"

"You can judge of that as well as I. But if she has, what does it amount to? Let the old woman pass."

"Very well, so be it—only that picture is so like her I couldn't help alluding to her."

The conversation now turned upon the war, and for some time the two men discussed the question as they understood it, and they came to the conclusion that it would take but a few weeks longer for Santa Anna to sweep the Yankees from the country. After this conclusion had been satisfactorily arrived at, Tudel arose to take his departure.

"I am not fit for presentation yet," he said, "for I am tall-worn and dusty. I will recruit myself in clothing and cleanliness, and then I'll come and see my bride. You will prepare her for the meeting. Tell her that I love her well, and that I love her alone."

St. Marc promised, and Jilok Tudel took his leave.

CHAPTER VI.

Alone in her chamber sat Irene St. Marc. She was one of the fairest of the fair of Vera Cruz, and many a crown of beauty's winning had been placed upon her brow. She was nineteen years of age, and from her mother she had inherited the pure blood of Castile. She was rather slight in frame, but by no means too much so; to have added one span to her height, or one degree to her size, would have surely detracted from the perfect symmetry of her form. Her hair was of a rich dark brown, and her eyes of that dark, soft hazel which possesses all the vivacity of the jetty black, with all the mild-persuensiveness of the deep, liquid blue. As she sat now, by the open window, gazing vacantly out through the vines that clustered thickly about the casement, her full, fair bosom rose and fell as though the thoughts that moved within were of more than ordinary import. The sun was just sinking, and as the last rays of the day glimmered into oblivion, the door of her room was opened, and her father entered. He gazed upon her a few moments without speaking, and then he moved to her side and imprinted a kiss upon her cheek. She started as though some small venomous insect had fallen there. Why that quick shudder should have come she could not tell—the emotion was an instinctive one—a quick movement of her own soul—and she almost wondered at it herself.

"Irene," spoke St. Marc, taking a seat near his daughter, "were you aware that Tudel had returned?"

"Yes, Cassandra told me he had come."

"And I suppose you will be ready to receive him when he shall call upon you?"

"I suppose I shall be obliged to see him, senator."

"Ah, do you still cherish that old hatred?"

"You can call it old or not, just as you please. It is my hatred of all things evil that leads me to despise Jilok Tudel."

"Bah! Why will you go so directly at work to make yourself miserable, my child? You must marry with him, and there should be an end of your hatred; for by hating him longer, you only sow the seeds of your own misery. Do you not understand it?"

"Surely, senator, I am not so blind as not to see that my hatred of the man will cause me misery if he is to be my husband. But you cannot say that the power of banishing the evil lies with me."

"Why not, pray?"

"O put your hand into the blazing fire, and see if you can withstand the pain by loving the fire."

"But my hand was made to be destroyed by fire."

"Ay—and so was my soul made to be miserable in its forced contact with evil. I can hardly yet believe that Jilok Tudel will be forced upon me."

"Take care, Irene. Do not allow such a feeling to creep into your bosom, for you must be that man's wife. Remember, this is planned beyond all power of redemption."

To this the maiden made no reply, and after a while her father added:

"I simply came to inform you that Tudel had come, and thus prepare you for his reception. For the rest your own judgment will dictate."

With these words St. Marc arose and left the room. Irene had already prayed to him enough; she had been upon her knees often before him in earnest supplication that this fatal marriage might be put away; but he had only maintained a stern refusal, and she would ask him no more. Why she should thus be sacrificed

ILLINOIS STATE NEWS

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Gov. Tanner's Thanksgiving Proclamation—Mother-in-Law Sues Man for Wife's Board—Paris Exposition Award for Illinois School Exhibit.

Gov. Tanner's Thanksgiving proclamation has been issued, as follows:

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise. In conformity to a praiseworthy custom, so long established that it has become an unwritten law of state and nation, and in remembrance of the rich gifts which, as a people, we enjoy at the hands of a bountiful Providence, I hereby designate Thursday, Nov. 20, 1900, as a day of public thanksgiving and praise; and I call upon all the good citizens of Illinois to observe this day in a manner appropriate to the purposes for which it is set apart, and in the spirit which inspired Israel's Shepherd King when he said unto his people: 'Know ye, that the Lord is good. It is he that hath made us, and not we, ourselves. We are his people and the sheep of his pasture. Come before his presence with singing. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise. Be thankful unto him and bless his name, for the Lord is good. His mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth forever.' And I further ask that, on this day, we all rest from our accustomed occupations; and that we make it a day of charitable thoughts and generous deeds to all our fellow-men, as well as a day of gratitude for God's bounty to us."

Mother-in-Law Sues Son.

A mother-in-law suing her son-in-law for the support of her daughter, his wife, was the novel proceeding in Judge G. A. Boyne's court in East St. Louis. The plaintiff was Mrs. Mary Jacobs and the defendant Bud Gunn. Mrs. Jacobs alleged that Gunn owed her $28, representing fourteen weeks' board for his wife. The sharply contested claim elicited evidence that demonstrated another case of "too much mother-in-law" and Judge Boyne rendered a decision in favor of the defendant. Mrs. Jacobs induced her daughter to live with her, charging that Gunn had threatened his wife's life. Judge Boyne in giving his decision said: "A man is not responsible for his wife's expenses when she does not live with him unless he makes it intolerable for her to live with him or neglects to provide for her."

School Exhibit Wins Prize.

Official notice has been received by State Superintendent Alfred Baylis that his department has been awarded a gold medal at the Paris exposition for its exhibit there. The exhibit consisted of the official forms used by the department, copies of the series of letters issued, copy of last biennial report, photographs of school buildings and sample reports of city superintendents of schools. The school buildings included in the collection of photographs were as follows: High schools at Moline, East St. Louis, La Salle, Bloomington, Cairo and Springfield; La Salle township high school, public school buildings at Aurora, Polo and Evanston, with some interior views of the latter.

Proposed Changes in Laws.

The Illinois code commission has concluded its session in Galesburg, recommending many important changes in the laws. Suggestions are made that the State furnish the record and pay the necessary expenses in the Supreme Court in capital cases; that the trial court assign an attorney to defend in the Supreme Court in such cases; that no hearing or decree in divorce cases be granted within three months of default or appearance; that the peremptory challenges of civil cases be increased to five; that contests of wills be limited to one year; that State's attorneys do not receive private fees for official services.

Champaign Girl Is Missing.

Ollye Holloway, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Holloway of Champaign, has been missing from home. She started for school at the usual hour, but never reported at the school. It is feared by some persons that she has been foully dealt with. Others think her mind has become unbalanced. She was an earnest student, and during some recent examinations was given a lower grade than a younger sister. Since that time she acted strangely.

Peoria May Lose Monument.

The handsome soldiers' and sailors' monument in Peoria, which cost almost $50,000 and was dedicated a year ago by President McKinley, may be sold to satisfy a claim of $13,000 still due on it. A proposition to pay the balance on the monument out of the county fund was submitted to the voters at the recent election and was voted down. The county has already given $10,000 to the monument fund and the city has given a like amount. Now the managers have an offer of $20,000 more than the debt cost and the understanding is that it will be sold unless something is done by the citizens of Peoria to raise the balance.

Failure to place a 2-cent revenue stamp on a note for $25 precipitated a row between Nathaniel Myers and E. A. Welch, two Clark County farmers. Myers gave the note to Welch as security for pasture rent; a difference arose over the terms and Myers refused to pay, claiming there was no revenue stamp on the note and it was not binding. The justice before whom the case was tried upheld Myers' contention. Welch brought the matter before the federal authorities and Myers was arrested on a charge of violating the internal revenue law. United States Deputy Commissioner Day at Paris heard the case and, while there was a technical violation of the statute, decided that Myers had not intended to defraud the government and he was discharged.

War between two of the greatest trusts in the United States is about to be inaugurated, according to a story given out in Joliet by men high in the councils of the Illinois Steel Company. The contract by which the American Steel and Wire Company purchased the entire output of the three rod mills of the Illinois Steel Company, in that city expired Oct. 1, and since that date the rod mills have been closed, as the trust refused to renew the contract and announced its intention of making its own rods. Accordingly the Illinois Steel Company has decided to go into the wire nail and fence business itself on a large scale, and will erect in Joliet at an expense of probably $500,000 an extensive branch to manufacture these lines and handle the output of its rod mills. The new plant, it is said, will employ from 1,000 to 1,500 men. Plans are now being drawn for the new plant. The work will be begun and pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

HON. GEO. R. LYON,
Our Candidate For Speaker of the Illinois Legislature.

Hon. George R. Lyon, of Waukegan, having announced his candidacy for Speaker of the Illinois Legislature, it seems fitting that The News, in this locality, where Mr. Lyon received such a splendid endorsement at the polls, should give a few of the many reasons why we favor his selection for that important position. In the first place Mr. Lyon's legislative experience coupled with his well-known ability as a parliamentarian and cool, level-headed judgement and sense of fairness, eminently qualify him for the discharge of the duties of that responsible and oft-times trying position. In every act of his public career Mr. Lyon has stood loyally by the interest of the common people, opposed to jobbery of every kind, and always recorded his vote and influence on the right side of every question. His political enemies as well as his friends always know where to find him, and the fellow with a boodle job on hand will always give George R. Lyon a wide berth. Never, perhaps, in the history of Illinois, has the need of honest men in responsible positions been as great as at the present time, and with George R. Lyon in the Speakers chair at Springfield and Hon. Richard Yates in the executive chair, the people of this great commonwealth may rest assured that Illinois will have no cause to blush for shame.

Why should Cullom be returned to the United States Senate? Express yourself briefly, not to exceed one hundred words, and mail it to The News for publication. If any good reason exists why Cullom is preferable to any other man, some of his friends should know the reason, and knowing it, should state it so that others may know. While the people have not a direct vote on electing a Senator, yet public opinion will have much to do in determining who shall be the man. "Boil down" your reasons to 100 words or less, sign your name to the article and mail it to The News for publication.

The News would respectfully suggest to the "city dads" that out of consideration to the children and the teachers who are forced to wade through mud ankle deep in going and coming from school, that a temporary foot bridge be laid across the creek, connecting with the walk on the west side, as the bridge and the Chicago postoffice will probably be completed at about the same time.

The Waukegan Gazette, in a leading editorial Monday, came out in advocacy of Judge Fuller for the United States Senate. We know of no reason why Judge Fuller would not make an acceptable Senator to the people of Illinois.

In calling attention to the fact that he is still a young man, did Mr. Bryan mean to serve notice on other would-be candidates of his party that he would still be in the ring in 1904?

There is no probability that Mr. Bryan will have to break his promise not to go to the Senate from Nebraska. The state will have two republican Senators.

JERRY SIMPSON says he's disgusted with the populists, but didn't they get disgusted with Jerry first?

BATAVIA, Ill., is entitled to a medal. The town did not give the democratic ticket a single vote.

What They Say.

The following extracts from exchanges voices their sentiments upon the candidacy of Hon. George R. Lyon, for speaker-ship of the Illinois Legislature:

Mr. Lyon is a gentleman whom Lake county people would like to see honored with the position.—Barrington Review.

The Gazette would suggest as a candidate for speaker of the lower house of the Illinois Legislature the Hon. George R. Lyon of Waukegan, a gentleman well fitted for that responsible position.

During the two terms he has represented this district in the legislature he has demonstrated on every occasion his fitness for the place. On all the important questions he has voted right and has championed the cause of the people and opposed boodles.

With Mr. Lyon in the speaker's chair Illinois would have no occasion to blush for the actions of its legislature, his well known honesty and love of fair play being a guarantee that all schemes and snap legislation would be stopped at the very outset.

He is an ardent supporter of Shelby M. Cullom for re-election to the U. S. Senate, and in this, as in everything else, represents an overwhelming majority of constituents, fully three-fourths of the republicans of the district favoring "Uncle Shelby's" retention at Washington.

Since the above was put in type we learn that Mr. Lyon has announced his candidacy for the speakership and will make an active contest for the place. The Gazette wishes him success.—Richmond Gazette.

Educate the Women.

In a sermon recently delivered at Rome by Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Ill., a Roman Catholic ecclesiast, he said: Since it is our duty to educate, it is our duty to give the best education, and first of all to give the best education to woman; for she, as mother, is the aboriginal God-appointed educator. What hope is there of genuine progress, in religious life especially, if we leave her uneducated? Where woman is ignorant, man is coarse and sensual, where her religion is but a superstition he is sceptical and irreverent. If we are to have a race of enlightened, noble and brave men, we must give to woman the best education it is possible for her to receive. She has the same right as a man to become all that she may be, to know whatever may be known, to do whatever is fair and just and good. In souls there is no sex. If we leave half the race in ignorance, how shall we hope to lift the other half into the light of truth and love?

Company Sued for Alimony.

The Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke company of Pittsburgh is being practically sued for alimony by Mrs. Marie Jutte, who some years ago secured a decree against her husband. He was then senior member of the coal firm of C. Jutte & Co., which subsequently was absorbed by the larger concern. Two years ago Mr. Jutte left this country, and now his former wife brings suit against the coal company, alleging that this is the only method by which she can obtain the alimony granted in court.

Good Town for Undertaker.

A newspaper printed in one of the English shires contains an advertisement which is hardly calculated to encourage outsiders to locate in the city of publication. An undertaker offers his business for sale, and as an inducement to possible purchasers refers to the town as follows: mortality from fevers excessively high; total death rate 10.7 higher than any town within radius of fifty miles; one trade competitor (carpenter) only. Excellent opening for energetic man willing to put his heart into the business.

Northern Wisconsin Railroad Lands

are increasing in value year by year. Railroads are the great civilizers, for they give the settler as well as the manufacturer equal opportunity to work in undeveloped fields, thereby rapidly settling the country and bringing forth its undiscovered riches. Northern Wisconsin is rich in iron ore, clay, kaolin, marl, timber and fine farm lands. It has made many a settler independent and added to the wealth of manufacturers who have bought this territory. Opportunities have not passed, as there is still a generous supply of land which can be obtained at low figures and on easy terms.

The Wisconsin Central Railway

was one of the first roads to penetrate the vast Northern Wisconsin Wilderness which stretches across the state from east to west. It also, has developed from year to year and today offers the best of transportation facilities, enabling all to ship the products of that section to any market in the world. CAMERA CATCHES FLEA

Five Thousand Times as Large as He Really Is.

The eye of the camera has been brought to bear upon the flea. Considering the difficulty with which the human optic meets in trying to accomplish the same thing this is a remarkable feat. Free and untrammelled the domestic flea has long cavorted upon green pastures, so to speak, in defiance of direct human investigation, and it remained for Fred Cloutman, a photographer of Boston, to produce photographic results, as shown in the accompanying 5,000 times enlarged reproductions. No. 1 shows the festive creature in a pose of impending action. The long hind legs are poised ready for a leap that, were the flea an elephant, would carry him twice and a half around the earth, allowing a distance proportionate to the relative size. The accompanying two pairs of assistant legs also shown are simply aids in the clever "give and get away" tactics of the active little creature. The small pair of antennae at the front of the head are reserved for the attack of prey and it is these that are responsible for much human woe. No. 2 shows an enlarged photograph of the head, legs and antennae and No. 3 the antennae alone. In the points of the antennae the poison of the insect is concealed. When the flea goes dining it is the antennae that are prodded into the flesh of its victim and through them the blood is absorbed, the poison being emitted in the process. It is lamentable for San Franciscans that Mr. Cloutman's art does not extend further than to the photographing of the fleaish insects. Did it portend the discovery of some means for the permanent extermination of the species his photographic triumphs might be pointed out and preserved with gratitude by a long-suffering public.

MANY RARE PEOPLE.

We Seldom Form Acquaintance with One, However.

It makes one homesick in this world to think that there are so many rare people he can never know, and so many excellent people that scarcely any one will know, in fact. One discovers a friend by chance, and cannot but feel regret that twenty or thirty years of life may have been spent without the least knowledge of him. When he is once known through him opening is made into another little world, into a circle of culture and loving hearts and enthusiasm in a dozen congenial pursuits, and prejudices perhaps. How instantly and easily the bachelor doubles his world when he marries, and enters into the unknown fellowship of the to him continually increasing company which is known in popular language as "all his wife's relations." Near at hand daily, no doubt, are those worth knowing intimately, if one had the time and the opportunity. And when one travels he sees what a vast material there is for society and friendship of which he can never avail himself. There are faces of refinement, of quick wit, of sympathetic kindness—interesting people, traveled people, entertaining people—whom you constantly meet and pass without a sign of recognition, many of whom are no doubt your long lost brothers and sisters. The matter of personal liking and attachment is a good deal due to the mere fortune of association.—Charles Dudley Warner.

AN IRISH MOUSE.

Ireland Sole Possessor of Creature of Zoological Interest.

Ireland has recently discovered itself to be the proud possessor of an animal which is exclusively Irish. Only a mouse, it is true, but then the smallest creatures have often the largest zoological interest. It appears that on the North Bull Sandbank, in Dublin bay, an islet about two and a half miles long which began to appear above water during the last quarter of the eighteenth century, there dwells in large numbers a mouse so much paler in color than the common house mouse as to be a distinct variety with legitimate hopes of one day being recognized as a sub-species. These mice are the descendants of one supposed of castaways and have in about a century thus adapted their coats in color to their sandy surroundings for protection against the owls and hawks which hunt over the island. The North Bull Sandbank mice are not all equally pale in color, and the zoological interest of the discovery lies in the opportunity afforded science to ascertain in how many generations a complete change of color for protective purposes is evolved. A long bridge connects the sand bank with the mainland, but as this is an open woodwork structure it is very unlikely that ordinary mice will intrude to disturb the progress of this natural experiment.

Home of Joan of Arc.

Just beyond the church is the Joan of Arc cottage, an ugly building which has no charm in itself or in its surroundings, says Clifton Johnson in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. It looks more like a big shed than anything else, for the roof all slants one way from a very high wall at the front to a very low one at the back. The inside is kept as a museum and it has all the museum's blankness and stiffness, with no suggestion of its ever having been occupied as a home. The old garden at the rear, with its narrow paths and little plots of flowers and vegetables, happily has about it a real touch of humility and you can fancy it is not unlike what it was in Joan's day and the mind easily calls up the scene in those twilight hours long ago when the bells of the near church rang and the voices spoke to the humble shepherd maiden.

FUN ABOARD BOAT.

A Lively and Frivolous Time with Shrewsbury Crabs.

The inherent frivolity of human nature was never better illustrated than one night recently on an incoming West 23d street ferryboat. The hour was late and the boat and its usual crowd of summer travelers, laden with bags and golf sticks, umbrellas and parasols. In the forward cabin were seated a group of boys, laden with the results of a day's crabbing on the Shrewsbury. They carried the crabs in an ingenious fashion. Around one claw of each crab was a string, says the New York Sun, and these strings enabled the youthful fishermen to carry their catch without any danger. One boy handled his bunch carelessly, and in a moment the floor of the ferryboat was filled with scurrying crabs. Each crab went in a different direction, and the speed attained by them was remarkable. Then the other passengers grew interested. With their umbrellas and canes they egged on the crabs to all sorts of strange gymnastics. On one side of the cabin four crabs clung from an umbrella held horizontally, while on the other side a giant crab dangled from a golf stick. In the center of the cabin other passengers started the crabs in races, making wagers on their favorites. It was a great three-ring circus, and the crabs seemed to like the attention they were attracting. Finally the boy collected the crabs, and then the passengers crowded round him and tried to buy the crabs, evidently wishing to take them home as pets. The boy refused all offers, however, and he and his companions trudged off with their day's lively catch.

ENCOURAGED BONDAGE.

Once New York Had a Municipal Slave Ship.

When New York city owned a slave ship is told in an article in Pearson's Magazine. The greatest impetus was given to the slave trade by the act of parliament of 1834, which legalized slavery in the North American colonies. This does not mean that slavery was unknown in what is now the United States before that time, because as early as 1620 a Dutch man-of-war landed and sold twenty African negroes at Jamestown, Va. In 1626 the West India company imported slaves from the West Indies to New York city, then New Amsterdam. The city itself owned shares in a slave ship, advanced money for its fitting out and shared in the profits of its voyages. This recognition and encouragement may account for the astounding fact that in 1750 slaves formed one-sixth of the entire population of New York. The general prevalence of slavery is shown by the fact that at this time there were sixty-seven slaves in New York's small suburb of Brooklyn, and that in London itself there were resident 20,000 slaves. Slaves were at that time publicly dealt in on the London exchange. No wonder the traffic in human flesh was a recognized commerce, and that in 1771 the English alone sent to Africa 192 ships equipped for the trade and with a carrying capacity of 47,146 slaves per trip.—New York Press.

HUNTING DEVIL.

Exciting Expedition Leads to an Act of Fiendish Atrocity.

A crime which brings one back to the middle ages in its barbaric superstition has occurred at a village called Lepeshy, about two miles from Kesh. A few days ago a fire broke out in the village, which, rapidly spreading along the thatched houses, consumed eight or ten instantly and destroyed many sheds and barns. A report soon spread that it was the work of the devil and the villagers set to work to find his human representatives. A man was soon spotted, an old resident, in whose house some mysterious goings-on were alleged to have taken place, and he was brought forth, his eyes burned out with a red hot iron and his body scorched, and, although a crowd of yokels arrived on the scene, no one interfered. Suddenly a more brutal peasant came up and, seizing a chopper, backed the poor victim's head off. A strict inquiry by the authorities is now proceeding.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hunting Malaria Microbes.

It is announced that Prof. Koch, bacteriologist, of Berlin, who has lately been hunting the microbes of malaria in Java and other hot countries, has perfected a medicine which is to be of the highest value in all malarial countries. It is half quinine, is to be used hypodermically and also as a swallowable medicine, and is commended both as a cure and as a preventive of malaria. Malaria is very much on the minds of wise men in many countries just now. The disposition to blame it all on the mosquito is supported so far by many experiments. Not only has health been maintained in malarious districts where effectual precautions against mosquitoes have been taken, but Italian mosquitoes fed in Rome on tertian-fever patients and brought to London and allowed to bite a healthy man have infected him with tertian fever. If the rule, "no mosquito, no malaria," be demonstrated, it will be a great gain, for mosquito bites are not so unavoidable as may be thought.

Mosquito Nets at Stations.

Last year two Italian railway lines passing through swampy regions supplied all their station houses with mosquito nets. In consequence, there has been such a diminution in the number of cases of malaria that other lines in Italy and in Sicily are about to adopt the same measures.

RAPIDLY DEVELOPING NORTHERN WISCONSIN

The settler and manufacturer who have located in the northern portion of the Badger State, are developing and improving that immense tract of country very rapidly. Tillers of the soil are coming in and new factories are going up. There is reason for this. The quality and quantity of iron ore, clay, kaolin, marl and timber lands till the secret. Nature yields its riches to those who toil. Opportunities are still plentiful, for much of the rich undeveloped land is awaiting the settler and manufacturer. It can be obtained on easy terms and at low figures.

A Paradise for Outlaws.

There is one corner of Central America that is at present a perfect paradise for men who have committed any crime. It is a place where the outcasts of the world's society rule the land of their adoption—and where the officials of the government protect all thieves that come to them and make it dangerous for any detective to molest them. This is the republic of Honduras, one of the least advanced of the states in South or Central America. Honduras, indeed, is a curious mixture of jungle and gigantic forest, of cocoa and of rubber trees,
of bugs, vampires, snakes and crocodiles
—of all manner of things that creep and crawl and sting and bite. A region where life in the daytime is a mockery and at night one feels as though sleeping in red pepper. Here, in every hamlet and city, are to be found men from different lands, mostly outlaws from their own country.
Chicago, Boston, New York and Philadelphia all furnish their quota. England, France, Italy, and even far-away Russia, have their share. They make no attempt at concealment bear the names they were born to wear, and go along about their business as if the laws of their own country had not declared them outcasts.

To Avoid Grammatical Error.

Appropos of the frequent wrong use "providing" for "provided" (as "he will go providing he is well"), the Boston Journal offers this simple rule for everybody: "Always use provided unless you find it makes nonsense."
That is easy to remember.

Did Best He Could.

A veteran who was boasting of his prowess during the civil war was asked,
"How many of the enemy did you kill, anyway?" "How many did I kill? How many did I kill?" repeated the veteran slowly. "Well, I don't know exactly how many, but I killed
as many of them as they did of me."

BATTLE OF CITIES.

Sharp Rivalry Between the Middle West and the Southwest.

It is not so much, however, the question of the rapidly with which Galveston or Mobile may advance, as compared with New Orleans, that promises to influence the standing of the western cities. It is rather the question of how much the enterprise of these two cities—with the aid of the new port and town of Port Arthur—may stimulate co-operation among all the cities of the gulf and thereby line up a strong force in a fight against the North Atlantic and the great lakes.

Within five years Galveston has pulled away from New York, Boston and Baltimore the supremacy in the handling of cotton, and is rapidly taking from all other points the first position in the handling of the southwestern corn and wheat. Mobile is gaining an iron and steel and woodwork business which formerly did not fall south of Baltimore, and it has some promise ahead of developments in shipbuilding.

Many great influences are at work, including that of the powerful Illinois Central, to compel the exports of the Mississippi Valley to take the natural water level route to the ocean via the "Father of Waters," rather than to climb the mountains that intervene between the west and the Atlantic. A more or less sectional feeling has grown up, extending westward to Denver, favoring the diversion of western products of all sorts to the gulf. If it should so develop that sufficient inhabitants and affluent wealth concentrate in the Gulf cities, it seems likely that the Atlantic cities will find their aggregate of traffic seriously impaired
—or at least their source of it seriously diminished—and that such places as Kansas City, St. Louis, Memphis, and perhaps Omaha will be materially aided in their efforts for growth and greatness by the additional and short-cut route to the sea afforded by flowing down the natural drain of the continent to the mouth of the Mississippi.

CONTESTS IN LONDON.

How the East Enders Amuse Themselves
in Winter.

East-enders are already preparing their programmes for spending the long, cold winter nights, and if life, as lived in Whitechapel, Shoreditch, Shap-ney and on the river side, is frequently hard, "Arry and Arrlet manage to get a lot of fun out of it. The east end season is just beginning, and the air is full of challenges from all sorts and conditions of champions. "Billiards are "in class" out Bow way, but a little match is a great event and draws a full house. Egg-eating, too, is becoming a show card, though it has not yet displaced the beefsteak pudding contests in popularity, says the London Express. Then shove ha'penny, mussel opening, oyster opening and haddock splitting all take the floor in turn and a struggle between two real champions at these "sports" proves a magnet. They take as much interest in the issue as many people do in the Derby. But it is music that does most delight the soul of "Arry and his donah and they walk miles to be present at any sort of musical contest. Nothing comes amiss and as long as the programme is carried out they are satisfied. A canary singing match is still worth pounds in custom to a publican, while "whistlers" are sure of good patronage. The supporters and admirers of Bill and Tom will spend money freely to hear their champions taking part in a mouth organ contest, and it is wonderful the melody that two "experts" can bring out of a comb. An ordinary piano or violin isn't in it.

HAD GREAT GRIT.

Minnesota Cripple Who Has Made a Wonderful Record.

Some time since Secretary of War Root commissioned a man to go to the Philippines and make some confidential observations. He made the investigations, returned to this country, prepared and submitted his reports. These reports so pleased the secretary that he wrote a personal letter of congratulation to the confidential agent. The man who made these reports was M. J.
Dowling of Minnesota. So far there is nothing remarkable about this story, but there is about Dowling. He has neither hands nor feet. Some 25 years ago Dowling was a boy, and was caught in one of the great blizzards which occasionally sweep over the northwestern country. He was badly frozen and though he battled bravely to save himself both feet and hands were frozen and had to be amputated.
This was pretty hard for a boy, but he was full of true grit. As soon as the stumps healed he determined to go to Milwaukee to secure artificial limbs.

The only way he could travel was by being laid upon the seat of a car, where he did not move during the entire journey. The conductor punched the ticket which was tied to him, thinking what hard luck the boy was in. Then he forgot the boy and the train journeyed on for miles and miles, stopped at a station for dinner, and again went on. Late in the afternoon the conductor felt full of remorse because he had given no further thought of the boy without hands or legs. He went back to him. "Do you want anything to eat?" he asked. "Yes," said the boy. "Why didn't you ask some one to get you something?" "I have been longer than this without eating and I won't trouble anybody with my misfortune," he replied. But the conductor got him something, and also saw him taken care of to the end of his run. The same self-reliance sustained Dowling throughout his life. He got his artificial limbs, educated himself, taught school, ran a newspaper, became a politician of prominence, and has been secretary of the National League of Republican Clubs. He gets along without cane or crutches, writes with his artificial hand, makes no complaint on the score of being crippled and asks no favor because he is short the average allotment of hands and feet. "Mike" Dowling is on this account one of the most interesting men in this country.

A THUNDERSTORM.

Its Formation Is Something Few of Us Understand.

The formation of a thunder storm is one of the familiar things that few of us know anything about it. That sounds like a contradiction, but it is not, for while we are familiar enough with the impressive spectacle made by the clouds as they gather and with the sometimes disastrous and always startling effects of the storm when it breaks over us, how many of us can trace it back to its origin, step by step, and tell how and where it got its terrible power? Let us try to do this.

There is no doubt that the electric charge of a cloud comes from an initial charge multiplied by induction.
The initial charge may be acquired by evaporation, for we know that electricity may be generated in that way.
Or it may be generated by the friction of vapor-laden air, which, moving as wind, comes in contact with objects on the earth's surface. This vapor is composed of very minute particles of water, each of which becomes electrified,
the charge accumulating on its surface. Now, as these particles of drops come together and are condensed into larger drops the surface area is reduced in proportion to the volume and an increased electric accumulation is the result. In other words, when two drops are condensed into one, there is the same quantity of water and of electricity was when the drops were separate, but there is a good deal less surface, and the electric charge is intensified to that extent. The drops so formed attract smaller drops by their greater power, and thus condensation, with continual increase of power, goes on rapidly and a thundercloud begins to form. As the cloud is sent forward by the wind it affects the earth's surface by induction, and the earth's surface affects it in the same way, the cloud becoming positively and the earth negatively charged. This goes on rapidly, electric energy being continually drawn to the cloud from the air, and the same quantity being repelled from the earth below. Thus it is that the thundercloud forms so quickly and acquires so great an electric power.

AN OLD-TIME THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving long ago.

There were uncles, aunts and cousins, by the sides and the dozens.

There was such a grinning table, the cutest roasted pig.

There were puddings, pies and cherries, and apple dumplings, cake and raisins, and turkeys all so big.

And they did not serve in courses, and post-prandial discourses.

There was such a grinning table, but the stories had their share.

Of the old-time pioneering, of the heartiness and cheerfulness.

Of the sympathetic neighbor, and the Indian and the bear.

And we found the apple cider and the old potato siller.

And the blue fish, all the apples, and preserves and pickled pears.

And we ranged the gloomy garret; we were very brave to do it.

But the box of maple sugar and dried fruit were up the stairs.

And around the barn we rolicked, and through the lofts we frolicked.

And we ranged the turnip cellar, and we tumbled in the straw.

And we heard the cattle munching, and the lowing and the crunching.

And we climbed along the mangers where the horses fed, with awe.

O that was a Thanksgiving that was worth a year of living.

And hearts seemed so much truer and life so smooth in flow.

And friends somehow were nearer, and loved ones so much dearer.

When we went down to grandma's for Thanksgiving, long ago.

Dick's Thanksgiving Dinner.

BY JOSEPHINE VOSS.

LATE on the day before Thanksgiving the boys were returning after a day spent in the woods, and all were in high spirits. They had succeeded in trapping a rabbit, which was now slung over Dick Morris' shoulder in sportsmanlike fashion, for to him was due most of the credit of capturing it, and he felt very proud.

"What are you going to do with the rabbit, Dick?" Edward White asked, gazing admiringly at it.

"Yes, that's it," exclaimed Archie Rhodes, "what will be done with it? Somebody tell."

"Why, cook it, of course," said Dick, and then a happy thought struck him. "Oh, I'll tell you what, fellows. We'll have it for dinner to-morrow. What do we catch it for if we didn't want to use it?" And glowing with pride, he gave all the boys a hearty invitation to dinner at his home the next day.

"It's all so!" shouted Fred Miller. "It's a go! It's come early in the morning so's to be on time!"

With a burst of pleasure his companions joined him in accepting the invitation, and then all went home to dream of the morrow's feast when they would partake of the spoils of the day's adventure.

"Did you bring anything from town for Thanksgiving dinner?" Mrs. Morris was saying to her husband as Dick stepped in the door.

Mr. Morris laughed.

"Did I bring anything? Ha! ha! I brought a thirty-five pounder. I sold the colt this afternoon and turned all the money over to Pritchard and that just raised the mortgage on our home. I tell you, I was mighty thankful, and I thought we'd celebrate the occasion among ourselves with the biggest turkey we could get. How's that?" he said, holding the fowl at arm's length.

"Couldn't we have a rabbit, too?" Dick suggested as he laid his bundle on the table.

"Mercy sakes!" exclaimed his mother, "where did you get that?"

With reluctance Dick told how in the spirit of fun he had trapped the rabbit.

"OR I'VE A TAIL DO."

and how Fred Miller's father had skinned and dressed it for him, and how he had invited all the boys to dinner.

"Well," said his father, "I don't mind havin' the boys come, but plain, everyday turkey's all they'll get and that's good enough for anybody. There won't be any frills on our dinner. And look here," he added sternly, "I don't prove of your trappin' rabbits for fun."

Dick was deeply disappointed and soon went to bed, but he couldn't sleep, and in the dead of night he stole out of his room.

"This is a nice fix," he said.

If he hadn't invited the boys, he wouldn't have cared. How would he tell them of the change in the menu of the expected feast? He simply couldn't do it, that was all. By the light of the moon that came in the window he saw on the table before him the humble little animal that he had captured lying by the side of the big turkey, which had been made ready for the oven and was fairly bursting with delicious dressing.

"Oh, I know what I'll do! There!" he said, as he unfastened the stout cord that bound the bulging sides of the turkey, scooped out the dressing, stuffed the rabbit in the ample cavity and fastened the cord again. "We'll have the rabbit anyhow, but nobody will know till it's cooked."

Then he went back to his room.

When he awoke in the morning the first thought that struck him was that his mischievous prank might spoil the whole dinner. Yes, he was sure it would. He had never heard of such articles of food being cooked together and he became badly frightened. He hastened to undo the work of the night, but it was too late. The turkey, with its head and neck, was already roasting to a nice brown in the oven. He felt very sorry when the boys came he took them aside and told them everything.

"Say, that's the jolliest kind of fun," Archie laughed. "I'm glad I came!"

"So am I," put in Edward. "What's the matter, Dick? You don't seem to enjoy this."

"Dick thought only of the spoiled dinner and what his parents would say when they discovered his trick."

Soon dinner was ready, and the guests were seated. Then came the vital moment. Mr. Morris took his place at the head of the table and was about to cut the turkey.

"I wonder what he'll say when he pulls the rabbit out," Fred whispered to Archie Rhodes.

"Guess he'll wonder what the turkey swallowed," was the humorous answer, and then both laughed.

"Cut that turkey, Sam," Mrs. Morris said to her husband; "what are you waiting for?"

Mr. Morris looked around at the smiling faces of his guests, then dug the knife deep into the savory fowl and suddenly stopped.

"Sairy!" addressing his wife, "you—"

"The boys burst into a fit of laughter. Dick turned a deep crimson and stood up."

"She didn't do it; I did it," he confessed.

"Sairy," Mr. Morris repeated, ignoring his son, "you burned the gravy. I smell it."

"No, I didn't. There! Pass the dressing around."

With a spoon he scooped the delectable filling of bread crumbs and chopped sausage and chestnuts out of the breast of the fowl, piled it on the plates, which were then passed around. Each boy stared in astonishment as he received his plate, and the meal began in silence.

"And now, boys," Dick's father said with a smile, "when you're finished with that we'll fetch in the rabbit."

"And sure enough, it was brought in, covered with rich brown gravy and slices of lemon."

"Won't we have a feast, though!" he exclaimed, looking at Dick.

But this was too much of a surprise for Dick, and he hardly knew what to say. When the dinner was fairly started his father arose to make a speech while Mrs. Morris tried to repress a smile.

"As this is a day of thanksgiving," he began, "we'll all give thanks. First, 'cause the mortgage is all paid now; and second 'cause by a lucky streak the rabbit got cooked alone. It was discovered just in time. When two strange feet are found sticking out of a turkey where it ain't held together, 'tain't hard to guess what's happened, especially when all the dressin's left in a bowl right beside it and everything, generally, looks as if it had been done in the dark. But seein' at you'd captured the poor little thing and wanted it so bad, we just thought we'd fix it up and serve it to-day, hopin' that in the future you'll never trap any more."

All laughed heartily as Mr. Morris concluded. For the first time that day Dick's mind was relieved of its great burden and he joined in the merry laughter. He never heard the end of his trick, but as his parents had taken it so kindly he respected their wishes and never again indulged in the sport of trapping rabbits.

Chestnut Stuffing.

Get two quarts of large French chestnuts. Shell and boil them until the skins are softened. Then drain off the water and remove the skins. Boll three pints of the chestnuts again until soft. Then press through a colander. Season with one and a half tablespoons of butter, one and a half tablespoons of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. If moist stuffing is desired, add three tablespoonfuls of cream.

STORY OF HORRORS.

AWFUL OUTRAGES COMMITTED BY BOXERS IN CHINA.

Deadly Cruel Beyond Belief—Women Cast Into Raging Fires—Priests Covered with Oil and Then Roasted to Death—Others Cut to Pieces.

Washington correspondence:

Authentic and detailed stories of the murder of missionaries and native Christians by the Boxers and Imperial soldiers in China are beginning to arrive. They show that the cruelty of the latter has been even more savage, heartless and extensive than heretofore believed. According to a correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury, Bishop Fontana, in South Honan, was tortured for four hours by Chinese. The members of his body were removed singly. The priests were covered with coal oil and placed in a pattern of sticks, which were then set on fire. Three fugitive converts, led by French priests, in defending their church, were massacred.

FOREIGNERS CUT TO PIECES.

The first reliable and graphic account of the massacre in Shansi has been brought to Chefoo by a native Christian teacher who escaped from the bloodthirsty foreign hater. He tells the following story: On June 28 the following murders were committed at Hsiao-Yi-Hsien, where two ladies of the China Inland mission were living alone, Miss Whitechurch and Miss Searell. About 300 Boxers broke into their compound.

The ladies sent a messenger to the District Magistrate for help. The official reproved the messenger and struck him. This gave notice to the crowd that they could attack with impunity. A crowd entered the premises, and the ladies knelt before the crowd and begged for mercy, but they were beaten on the heads with clubs. Some also took glass bottles and broke them on their heads. The ladies lived about one hour. Their clothes were taken off and their watches carried away.

Mr. and Mrs. Pigott and son, Mr. Robinson, Miss Duval and two daughters of the Rev. Mr. Atwater were driven from their homes into the mountains. They soon returned and were arrested by the District Magistrate and compelled to go in chains to Taiyuen. On the way they were not permitted to buy food.

Three Herd Into Flames.

On June 29 the foreign houses at Taiyuen were burned, and the missionaries, with the exception of Miss Combs, escaped to the English Baptist mission. Hundreds of Boxers had crowded into the houses, and when the missionaries fought their way through the crowd she was left behind. She pleaded for her life, but, after looting the house, they set fire to it and threw her into the flames.

The missionaries stayed several days at the Baptist mission, but on July 9 the governor ordered them all to come to the yamen under the pretense that he intended to escort them safely to the coast. On entering the yamen the missionaries were surrounded by soldiers. These formed a large circle, and into this circle about thirty Boxers were invited to come. One by one the missionaries were dragged to the center and cut to pieces. Their heads were placed in baskets, which were hung upon the gates. About forty native Christians were killed at the same time. The following day ten Roman Catholic priests, chiefly French, were killed in the same way.

The bodies of the thirty-three foreigners killed were placed in wooden cases and all buried in the Baptist church. The list of the killed, besides those already given, as far as known, is: Mr. Stokes and wife, Mr. Beynon, wife and three children, Mr. Farthing, wife and three children, Dr. Lovitt and wife and one child, Mr. and

BEGGED IN VAIN FOR MERCY.

Mrs. Whitehouse, Mr. Simpson and wife, and Dr. Miller Wilson and wife. It is also reported that in and around Taiyuen over 800 native Christians have been murdered.

The mission of the American board, at Tai-Ku, escaped the first intensity of the general attack upon foreigners, but on July 31, 300 Boxers attacked the mission premises. The members of the mission present were: F. W. Davis, G. D. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Clapp, Miss Rowena Bird and Miss Susan Partridge. The three men resisted by going on the roofs and firing upon the crowd. A few Boxers were killed, but the ammunition ran out, and the missionaries were all soon beheaded and their bodies thrown into the flames of the burning houses.

The heads were all taken to Taiyuen and exposed as the others had been. One hundred native Christians were killed at the same time. The American mission at Panchowfu, fifty miles southwest of Taiyuen, was one of the last victims. There both the protect and District Magistrate had been kindly disposed to foreigners. The members of the mission present were: Mr. and Mrs. Atwater and two children and Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Price and son. There were also present members of the Swedish mission, Mr. and Mrs. Langren, naturalized American citizens, and Miss Eldred, an English lady. Up to Aug. 13 none of these were molested, but the prefect died and the governor sent a new man, fully in sympathy with his worst designs.

This man demanded that the mission people leave the city, and although Mrs. Atwater was seriously ill, they left under a guard of twenty Chinese soldiers. When just outside the city a shot was fired. At this signal the soldiers rushed upon the helpless victims and cut them down with their swords. Their bodies were stripped and buried in a ditch. The escaped messenger returned the second day to learn the fate of his foreign friends.

INDIANS IN DIRE DISTRESS.

Many Thousands of Pima and Papago Suffer from Lack of Food.

Some time ago news reached the Indian department that the Pima and Papago tribes in Arizona were rapidly reaching a condition of starvation. In order to learn authoritatively whether these rumors were true or false the department directed S. M. McCowan, superintendent of the Indian school at Phoenix, Ariz., to make an examination in the condition of affairs. Mr. McCowan has done as directed and reports a most deplorable situation. He found the Pima reservation a parched desert and was amazed at the sufferings of the uncomplaining red man. The Indians live in mud and brush huts scattered all over the reservation. Numbers of them huddle together at night in the huts without respect to ventilation. Disease is threatening to augment the misery of the distressed people.

Altogether Mr. McCowan finds that 10,000 human lives in Arizona are imperiled by famine. While waiting for the government to distribute rations, 8,000 Pimas and the Ojibwa reservation and a like number of Papagos who roam over a vast dry section of southern Arizona are suffering from hunger. The destitution is the more deplorable because these Indians, who befriended the white man when he invaded their country many years ago, and for generations have been self-supporting nations, are reduced to pauperism and misery through the acts of the white settler. Never before in the history of the Pima tribe have the Indians been so destitute.

INCREASE IN DEAD LETTERS.

Amount Nearly 10 Per Cent More Than for Previous Year.

The annual report of the superintendent of the dead-letter office shows the large increase of total receipts of undelivered mail matter over the previous year of nearly 10 per cent. The number of pieces of matter received from all sources was 7,630,158, against 6,855,983 for the preceding year. Letters and parcels held for postage numbered 144,019, and the misdirected 422,703. The number of letters and parcels opened was 9,079,003, an increase over the preceding year of 94 per cent.

There were 50,553 letters containing an aggregate of $4,140, and letters containing drafts, notes, money orders, etc., of the face value of $1,180,645. Foreign letters and parcels found undeliverable and returned to countries of origin numbered 606,412.

POSTAL-SERVICE ESTIMATES.

Congress Will Be Asked for an Appropriation of $121,000,000.

Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith has framed estimates to be submitted to Congress and will ask an aggregate of about $121,000,000 as the appropriation for the entire service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902. This includes an estimate of $8,600,000 for rural free delivery service. By the close of this fiscal year 4,300 rural free delivery routes throughout the United States will have been established and the general extension contemplated for next year will involve about 4,500 additional routes. The Postmaster General, together with other officials, is investigating the feasibility of putting the service in operation at every point throughout the country not reached by the regular free delivery services in operation in the cities.

New York to Fight Hydrophobia.

Ordinarily there are two or three deaths per year in New York City from hydrophobia. During the past year there have been eight or nine deaths from this disease. Fearing a continued increase in fatalities in future the Board of Health will provide a special laboratory in the Willard Parker hospital where the Pasteur treatment will be provided free to all persons in Greater New York bitten by rabid dogs.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL.

New York.—In the foreign trade statement for October the showing is a phenomenal one. Exports for the month amounted to $103,003,007, which is $37,427,070 larger than for the same month last year and $28,930,872 in excess of the previous high record. More than one-third of the exports were of cotton, while the value of manufactured goods sold abroad was about $58,000,000. Imports fell off slightly in the face of this enormous increase in exports, the excess of exports over imports for the month being $32,475,220, the largest in any month in the history of the country. The figures for October make the excess for the ten months ending Oct. 31 about $400,000,000, an increase of $120,000,000 over the corresponding period last year.

Chicago.—Wheat during the week ended considerable weakness, the decline having been 3 cents a bushel. While the bulls in the wheat market lost by the drop, the reason for their speculative venture having taken that unfortunate turn is a gratifying proof that notwithstanding the partial failure of the spring wheat crop of the Northwest, of which so much has been heard in the last three months, such superabundance was produced in other sections of the country as to more than compensate for the deficiencies of Minnesota and North Dakota. While prices of wheat are lower than they were, they are not yet low, relatively considered, and must be highly satisfactory to the farmers of that section of the country where the huge marketings have brought about the accumulations of viable supply that is the cause of the weakness in price. The government report on the season's production of corn shows this year's production to be over 2,100,000,000 bushels, being the largest crop since 1890, while consumption of corn meantime has been increasing so rapidly that what was considered even so recently as four years ago an excessive crop is not now thought to be more than sufficient for the demands from various sources that it will be called upon to meet.

A CENTURY'S MIGRATION.

How Enkops Has Fed This Country with Brawny Citizens.

Immigration to the United States, which fell off materially four or five years ago, recovered during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, says the Philadelphia North American, the figures for that year being the largest since 1892, and third to the record year, 1892, when over three-quarters of a million foreign immigrants landed in this country. Here is the score:

	1900	1899	1898	1897
Croatians	8,006	2,335	1,060	1,060
Poles	8,783	69	69	69
Germans	23,382	1,009	1,009	1,009
Greeks	3,714	3,714	3,714	3,714
Hebrews	44,520	8,173	8,173	8,173
Irish	25,200	611	611	611
Scots	2,200	1,700	1,700	1,700
South Italy	82,320	88,254	88,254	88,254
Lithuanians	9,170	2,541	2,541	2,541
Magyars	39,833	10,172	10,172	10,172
Poles	25,892	6,881	6,881	6,881
Scandinavians	22,817	22,817	22,817	22,817

As will be seen, most of these immigrants were illiterate. The Irish and the Poles show the smallest proportion of illiterates. The higher intelligence of the Irish immigrants over the records of a few years ago is particularly noticeable. Most of the immigrants of this year were very poor, the Germans bringing with them about $30 each; the Hebrews less than $10; the Northern Italians, $22; the Southern Italians, $7; the Slavs, $13; the Greeks and Croatians, $16; the Lithuanians, $8; and the Irish, Poles and Magyars, $10.

BIG BALANCE OF TRADE.

Nearly $500,000,000 in Favor of United States for Ten Months.

The value of merchandise imported into the United States in the month of October was $70,018,371, being $1,013,807 less than those for the same month last year. The exports were valued at $103,003,507, an increase of $37,027,070 over that for October, 1899, and exceeding by $28,930,872 the highest record recorded in a single month. For the ten months ended Oct. 31 the imports were valued at $695,107,269, exceeding by $30,072,933 those for the like period last year, and the exports were valued at $1,044,775,205, an increase of $104,331,178 over those for the same months in 1899, and establishing a new high-water mark for that period. The balance of trade in favor of the United States for the trade for the ten months was $400,007,030, or $129,658,546 greater than in the same months of 1899.

CLOSED BY MR. DAWES.

Newport, Ky., Bank in Hands of Examiner Tucker.

The German National Bank of Newport, Ky., has been closed by order of the Comptroller of the Currency, and Bank Examiner Tucker placed in charge as temporary receiver. Twice the amount of its capital stock is missing from the vaults of the bank as a result of the operations of Frank M. Brown, the individual bookkeeper and assistant cashier, who is missing. Mr. Tucker made the unofficial announcement that Brown is short about $201,000. Brown had been with the bank eighteen years, and it is stated by the experts that his operations extended back as far as ten years.

For two weeks there have been rumors that Brown was short, and some depositors withdrew their accounts. Three weeks ago the bank examiners made a good statement for the bank and the officers and directors allayed suspicion by referring to the report of this examination and to their last statement. The wildest scenes were witnessed in Newport when the notice was posted. The officers of the German National Bank are all wealthy and responsible men, and they will be able to make the losses good.

$5,000 REWARD

Owing to the fact that some people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000 which will be paid to any person who will show that the following testimonials are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the written special permission. —LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

How shall a mother who is weak and sick with some female trouble bear healthy children? How anxious women ought to be to give their children the blessing of a good constitution!

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry a babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six-month-old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at six months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound, and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old, and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been. —Mrs. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

CORN CROP A BIG ONE.

CLAIMED TO BE THE THIRD LARGEST ON RECORD.

Government Estimate Places Yield at 25.3 Bushels an Acre—Iowa Takes the Lead, Showing 309,000,000 Bushels—Other Crops.

From estimates based on information gathered by Statistician Hyde of the Department of Agriculture the corn crop of the country will be 2,108,000,000 bushels. This is 30,000,000 bushels more than last year and is the largest corn crop since 1890, when 2,238,000,000 bushels were raised. This year's crop, if maintained, will be the final estimate, will be the third largest on record. The surplus States will have 1,885,000,000 bushels, or 30,000,000 bushels more than last year and 251,000,000 bushels in excess of 1898.

Iowa takes the lead with a crop of 309,000,000 bushels of corn, or 04,000,000 bushels more than last year, and it is next to the largest crop, estimated by the government, on record, which was 321,000,000 bushels, in 1890. The State Department of Iowa, however, gives the year's estimate as 310,000,000 bushels, in second place with 204,000,000 bushels, or within 20,000,000 bushels of its best record.

The crop of the surplus States, as estimated on the yield per acre, furnished by the Department of Agriculture, for the past two years makes the following showing:

	1900.	1899.
Ohio	107,000,000	99,000,000
Indiana	153,000,000	142,000,000
Illinois	204,000,000	247,000,000
Missouri	181,000,000	193,000,000
Kansas	204,000,000	238,000,000
Iowa	309,000,000	242,000,000
Nebraska	210,000,000	224,000,000
Total	1,335,000,000	1,365,000,000
Total crop	2,108,000,000	2,078,000,000

The yield of corn per acre is 25.3 bushels, as compared with 25.31 bushels in 1890, or 24.70 bushels in 1898, and a year's average of 24.4 bushels. The highest average, as compared with a month ago, is produced by the Southern States showing up better than expected.

The indicated yield per acre in Ohio is 37 bushels, in Indiana and Iowa 35, in Illinois 37, in Missouri 28, in Kansas 19, and in Nebraska 20 bushels. The average as to quality is 85.5 per cent, as compared with 87.2 per cent last year, and 82.7 per cent in November, 1898. It is estimated that 4.4 per cent of the corn crop of 1899 was still in the hands of farmers on Nov. 1, 1900, as compared with 5.9 per cent of the crop of 1898 in farmers' hands on Nov. 1, 1899, and 7.25 per cent of that of 1897 in hand on Nov. 1, 1898.

An estimate of the wheat crop will be issued as soon as the individual farm returns are available for comparison with the reports of the department's regular correspondents. This will be not later than Dec. 10.

WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Position of the British There Is Far from Being Favorable.

The war between the British and Boers in South Africa is far from being ended. The position of the British forces there is decidedly worse than when they first occupied Pretoria in June. The fact that the Boers no longer have an important fixed position to be attacked has left them free to indulge in the ubiquitous, roving warfare which they are prosecuting with such extraordinary success. The British no longer have any definite objective for heavy operations, and are as far as ever from acquiring equal numbers with the Boers at scattered fighting.

The burghers are now masters of the country in the western Transvaal around Vryburg. They also hold all the keys to the Southern Free State, and have repeatedly held the main railway from Pretoria to Cape Town, above the Orange river. They have recently captured trains and supplies, severed British communications and captured several small British garrisons. These successes have increased the activity of all the Boer forces in the field. The net result is that Botha, De Wet and Delarey are all as strong as they were four months ago. When supplies are short they sweep down on some village which the British hold, and which they know is well filled, and help themselves.

The unreconcilable bitterness of the Boer women is extraordinary. It was the women and other neutrals that brought the Boers right into Jacobsdal and Philippolis, where they overpowered the garrisons. The struggle is rapidly drifting into a race war, involving everybody living in the country. When President Kruger sailed from Delagoa bay it was immediately declared that he was a mere private harmless refugee, embarrassing only to the country which he visited. It is impossible to maintain that belief now. It is seriously possible that with Kruger now in Europe and the Boers active in South Africa some power may seek to advise Delagoa to arrange a settlement. That that advice will be rejected is certain, but the offering of it will continue the Boer belief that their struggle for independence is not hopeless.

WANTS CABINET TO REMAIN.

President Expresses Hope That Not One Will Retire.

At the meeting of the cabinet Monday President McKinley, discussing the recent elections and their results, expressed the hope that every member of the cabinet would remain in his official family during the next four years. The cabinet meeting was devoted largely to the discussion between the President and his advisers of his forthcoming message to Congress. It was practically decided that the recommendation in the message on the subject of the war revenue taxes will advocate a small reduction, scaling down the total revenue about $15,000,000. Just where this decrease will be made has not been determined.

Considerable attention will be devoted to the Nicaragua canal in the message, but the President's recommendations are not yet clearly formulated. The Chinese question was discussed only in a general way.

SUES A SENATOR.

Miss M. L. Leeton of Lafayette, Miss., is the plaintiff in a sensational breach of promise suit recently begun in Washington against Senator Sullivan of her own State. The plaintiff wants $50,000 damages. Miss Leeton, who is a comely young woman of 23 years, declares that the Senator refused to marry her, after promising to do so. Senator Sullivan denies the charges made by the young woman. He says she has absolutely no claim on him, and that an attempt was made to extort money from him. Miss Leeton at the time she first met Senator Sullivan was married, but did not live with her husband. Afterward she secured a divorce.

PARIS FAIR ENDS.

Great Crowds Throng the Grounds on the Closing Day.

The Paris exposition of 1900 ended Monday night in a blaze of illumination. The booming of cannon from the first story of the Eiffel Tower at midnight announced the close of the great fair. This signal marked the height of a fête that was brilliant, though not largely attended. This celebration, the last of the summer and autumn of gaiety, in which over 50,000,000 people from all parts of the world have taken part, was marked by a cold, drizzling rainfall. Tickets that had brought a sou in the afternoon were sold at the rate of five for a sou. The work of removing exhibits began shortly after midnight, and within a few weeks nothing will be left of the great exposition except the immense hothouses on the northern bank of the Seine and the art palaces.

The total of paid admissions was 40,000,000. Including free tickets, the total is more than 60,000,000. The average attendance was about 250,000 daily, the largest number being that of the first Sunday in September, 600,000.

M. Hanotaux, former minister of foreign affairs, in an article entitled "The Balance Sheet of the Exposition," says: "France expended 200,000,000 or 300,000,000 francs to erect the exposition. She has recovered them easily in the increase of the treasury receipts, which for this year alone is nearly 100,000,000 francs. In the surplus of Parisian social life, in the monuments remaining to the state or the city, and in the quays, bridges and improved transportation facilities bequeathed by the exposition. Moreover, there has been a general toll of the city, which has contributed to its brilliance and beauty."

One of the notable events in Europe is the assembling of the Spanish-American congress at Madrid. The first session was held Friday. Every South American republic, with the exception of Bolivia, will be represented. The congress is the outgrowth of a sentiment that began to develop in Spain soon after the close of the Spanish-American war. Spain, filled with resentment against the United States, conceived the idea of cultivating a close commercial alliance with her former colonies. Her proposals to this end were accepted with an eagerness upon the part of the South American republics that occasioned no little surprise in the United States. The proceedings of the congress will be watched with interest.

The French Parliament opened on Tuesday. In outlining the general policy of the government Premier Waldeck-Rousseau stated that the ministry invited discussion of proposals for old age pensions, a reduction in the tax on alcohol, official arbitrators for labor disputes, reform in courts-martial, and the law of associations. The latter proposal refers to the crusade the present French ministry has vigorously pursued against the religious organizations, similar to the Assumptionist Fathers, which have become notorious for their sympathy with the Nationalist and other revolutionary movements.

The negotiations between the envoys of the powers in Peking and Prince Ching and Li-Hung-Chang on the part of China have made no apparent progress since last week. The delay in tangible results is doubtless occasioned by the inability of the powers to agree among themselves.

Prince Hohenlohe, who recently resigned his place as chancellor of the German imperial cabinet, has given to the public a statement in which he tacitly admitted that his resignation resulted from his belief that the Kaiser had shown "a growing desire to ignore him on important occasions."

In many of the census returns from the rural districts of the South a large number of children under 10 years of age are recorded as farm laborers, and under the proper headings it is stated that they are to be employed eight months and attend school but two months in each year. The Southern housewives appear in the occupation column as "does housework" and "minds baby."

Gen. James H. Wilson has been recalled from duty as chief of staff to Gen. Chaffee, as the negotiations with China will be made through Minister Conger.

A PROMINENT LADY

Speaks in Highest Terms of Peruna as a Catarrh Cure.

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, member Rebecca Lodge, Iola Lodge, also member of Woman's Relief Corps, writes the following letter from 1838 Jackson street, Minneapolis, Minn.:

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, Minneapolis, Minn.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O. Gentlemen:—As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for over six years. I had tried several remedies without relief. A lodge friend advised me to try Peruna, and I began to use it faithfully before each meal. Since then I have always kept it in the house. I am now in better health than I have been in over twenty years, and I feel sure my catarrh is permanently cured.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes systemic catarrh the digestion becomes good, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—systemic catarrh. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause; nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause. Address The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a book treating of catarrh in its different phases and stages, also a book entitled "Health and Beauty," written especially for women.

FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the obligations of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected; that severe mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

Mrs. MARY FRANCES LITTLE, of 2 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura, blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

Mrs. WILLIAM BARTLE, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to see that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

News reaches us this morning of the death of Mabel, the oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Efinger, of Waukegan, at the home of Mrs. Efin-gers parents at Fox Lake, which occurred last night, from diptheria.

We understand that Mrs. Efinger and one other of the children are down with the disease.

The Kenosha Feather Renovating Company expect to remain here only about two weeks longer, and persons who contemplate having work done
in their line should see them at once.
As far as we have been able, to learn their work has given very general satisfaction, and the large amount of feathers that have been delivered each day at their factory is pretty good evidence that they have been busy.

A very pleasant home wedding occurred yesterday, Nov. 21, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs.
A. B. Paddock, at Channel Lake, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter Birdie, to Leslie H. Rogers, Rev. E. J. Aikin, officiating. The bride is an estimable young lady. The groom, although young in years, has lived long in this community, and is universally esteemed. That they may live long on happiness and short on sorrow, is the wish of The News. They will reside in Waukegan.

It will not be a surprise to any who are at all familiar with the good qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, to know that people everywhere take pleasure in relating their experience in the use of that splendid medicine and in telling of the benefit they have received from it, of bad colds it has cured, of threatened attacks of pneumonia it has averted and of the children it has saved from attacks of croup and whooping cough. It is a grand, good medicine. For sale by W.
H. Emmons, Antioch; Thomson's
Pharmacy, Grayslake.

one flower, presented to the society,

model is of tan cloth, is double-breasted and has a velvet collar and large pearl buttons, four only, instead of the eight used last season.

If you expect to share in the benefits of the order, you should be willing to bear some of its burdens, part of which is in coming to the camp and helping to run it properly. Remember that the action of your camp, particularly on the reserve fund question, from your standpoint, is more important to you than to anyone else, and it is your duty to have a voice and a vote on what shall be done.

There is no pleasure in life if you dread going to the table to eat and can't rest at night on account of indigestion. Henry Williams, of Booneville, Ind., says he suffered that way for years, till he commenced
the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, and adds,
"Now I can eat anything I like and all I want and sleep soundly every night." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will digest what you eat. W. T. Hill.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drought, have been plainly printed in his now famous almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 almanac, as one of the disasters by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready.
This remarkable book of nearly two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company,

Fox Lake Electric Railroad.

The Waukegan and Fox Lake Electric Railway Company has filed its letter of acceptance of the franchise granted by the Waukegan city council for the construction of a line into this city.

The papers were filed with City Clerk Thacker and it is an important step forward towards the realization of the enterprise which was thought by some would not materialize.

Long Line of Prairie Schooners.

In one day recently sixty prairie schooners, making a string about a mile long, passed Guthrie, Okla., on their way to the Kiowa and Commanche country. They were mostly from this state or Missouri. People down in that section are at a loss to know why these pioneers should go there this season, because they will have to camp out all winter on the prairie. The reservation will not be opened until April 4.
